An American Forest.

Medium (without). HILLI ho! ho!
Trudge (without). Hip! hollo! ho!—Hip!—

Enter Medium and Trudge.

Med. Pshaw! it's only wasting time and breath. Bawling won't persuade him to budge a bit faster. Things are all alter'd now; and, whatever weight it may have in some places, bawling, it seems, don't go for argument, here. Plague o'nt! we are now in the wilds of America.

Trudge. Hip, hillio—ho—hi!—

Med. Hold your tongue you blockhead, or—

Trudge. Lord! Sir, if my master makes no more haste, we shall all be put to sword by the knives of the natives. I'm told they take off heads like hats, and hang 'em on pegs in their parlours. Mercy on us! My head aches with the very thoughts of it. Holo! Mr. Inkle! master; holo!

Med. Head aches! Zounds, so does mine with your confounded bawling. It's enough to bring all the natives about us; and we shall be stript and plunder'd in a minute.

Trudge. Aye; stripping is the first thing that would happen to us; for they seem to be woefully off for a wardrobe. I myself saw three, at a distance, with less clothes than I have when I get out of bed: all dancing about in black buff; just like Adam in mourning.

Med. This is to have to do with a schemer! a fellow who risques his life, for a chance of advancing his interest.—Always advantage in view! Trying, here, to make discoveries that may promote his profit in England. Another Botany Bay scheme, mayhap. Nothing else could induce him to quit our foraging party, from the ship; when he knows every inhabitant here is not only as black as a pepper-corn, but as hot into the bargain—and I, like a fool, to follow him! and then to let him loiter behind.—Why, Nephew!—Why, Inkle.—(calling)

Trudge. Why, Inkle——Well! only to see the difference of men! he'd have thought it very hard, now, if I had let him call so often after me. Ah! I wish he was calling after me now, in the old jog-trot way, again. What a fool was I to leave London for foreign parts?——That ever I should leave threadneedle-street, to thread an American forest, where a man's as soon lost as a needle in a bottle of hay!

Med. Patience, Trudge! Patience! If we once recover the ship——

Trudge. Lord, sir, I shall never recover what I have lost in coming abroad. When my master and I were in London, I had such a mortal snug birth of it! Why, I was factotum.

Med. Factotum to a young merchant is no such fine-cure, neither.

Trudge. But then the honour of it. Think of that, Sir; to be clerk as well as own man. Only consider. You find very few city clerks made out of a man, now-a-days.

a-days. To be king of the counting-house, as well as lord of the bed-chamber. Ah ! if I had him but now in the little dressing-room behind the office ; tying his hair, with a bit of red tape, as usual.

Med. Yes, or writing an invoice in lampblack, and shining his shoes with an ink-bottle, as usual, you blundering blockhead !

Trudge. Oh if I was but brushing the accounts, or casting up the coats ! mercy on us ! What's that ?

Med. That ! What ?

Trudge. Didn't you hear a noise ?

Med. Y—es--but—hush ! Oh heavens be prais'd ! here he is at last.

Enter Inkle.

Now nephew !

Inkle. So, Mr. Medium.

Med. Zounds, one wou'd think, by your confounded composure, that you were walking in St. Jame's Park, instead of an American forest : and that all the beasts were nothing but good company. The hollow trees, here, centry boxes, and the lions in 'em soldiers ; the jackalls, courtiers ; the crocodiles, fine women ; and the baboons, beaus. What the plague made you loiter so long ?

Inkle. Reflection.

Med. So I should think ; reflection generally comes lagging behind. What, scheming, I suppose ; never quiet. At it again, eh ? What a happy trader is your father, to have so prudent a son for a partner ! Why, you are the carefulest Co. in the whole city. Never losing sight of the main chance ; and that's the reason, perhaps, you lost sight of us, here, on the main of America.

Inkle. Right, Mr. Medium. Arithmetic, I own, has been the means of our parting at present.

Trudge. Ha ! A sum in division, I reckon. (Aside)

Med. And pray, if I may be so bold, what mighty scheme has just tempted you to employ your head, when you ought to make use of your heels ?

Inkle. My heels ! Here's pretty doctrine ! Do you think I travel merely for motion ? A fine expensive plan for a trader truly. What, wou'd you have a man of business come abroad, scamper extravagantly here and there and every where, then return home, and have nothing to tell, but that he has been here and there and every where? 'Sdeath, Sir, would you have me travel like a lord?

Med. No, the Lord forbid! "but I am wrong perhaps: there is something in the air of this forest, I believe, that inclines people to be hasty."

Inkle. Travelling, Uncle, was always intended for improvement; and improvement is an advantage; and advantage is profit, and profit is gain. Which, in the travelling translation of a trader, means, that you shou'd gain every advantage of improving your profit.

"Med. How——gain, and advantage, and profit? Zounds I'm quite at a loss."

"Inkle. You've hit it Uncle, so am I. I have lost my clue by your conversation: you have knock'd all my meditations on the head."

"Med. It's very lucky for you no-body has done it before me."

Inkle. I have been comparing the land, here, with that of our own country.

Med. And you find it like a good deal of the land of our own country—curstedly encumber'd with black legs, I take it.

Inkle. And calculating how much it might be made to produce by the acre.

Med. You were?

Inkle. Yes; I was proceeding algebraically upon the subject.

Med. Indeed!

Inkle. And just about extracting the square root.

Med. Hum!

Inkle. I was thinking too, if so many natives cou'd be caught, how much they might fetch at the West Indian markets.

Med. Now let me ask you a question, or two, young Cannibal Catcher, if you please.

Inkle. Well,

Med.

Med. Arn't we bound for Barbadoes; partly to trade, but chiefly to carry home the daughter of the governor, Sir Christopher Curry, who has till now been under your father's care, in Threadneedle-street, for polite English education?

Inkle. Granted.

Med. And isn't it determin'd, between the old folks, that you are to marry Narcissa as soon as we get there?

Inkle. A fix'd thing.

Med. Then what the devil do you do here, hunting old hairy negroes, when you ought to be ogling a fine girl in the ship? Algebra, too! You'll have other things to think of when you are married, I promise you. A plodding fellow's head, in the hands of a young wife, like a boy's slate after school, soon gets all its arithmetic wip'd of: and then it appears in its true simple state: dark, empty, and bound in wood, Master Inkle.

Inkle. Not in a match of this kind. Why, it's a table of interest from beginning to end, old Medium.

Med. Well, well, this is no time to talk. Who knows but, instead of failing to a wedding, we may get cut up, here, for a wedding dinner: tofs'd up for a dingy duke perhaps, or stew'd down for a black baronet, or eat raw by an inky commoner?

Inkle. Why sure you arn't afraid?

Med. Who, I afraid! Ha! ha! ha! No, not I! What the deuce should I be afraid of? Thank heaven, I have a clear conscience, and need not be afraid of any thing. A scoundrel might not be quite so easy on such an occasion; but it's the part of an honest man not to behave like a scoundrel: I never behav'd like a scoundrel—for which reason I am an honest man, you know. But come—I hate to boast of my good qualities.

Inkle. Slow and sure, my good, virtuous Mr. Medium! Our companions can be but half a mile before us: and, if we do but double their steps, we shall overtake 'em at one mile's end, by all the powers of arithmetic.

Med.

10 I N K L E A N D Y A R I C O :

Med. Oh curse your arithmetic ! How are we to find our way ?

A ship at anchor in the bay at a small distance.

Enter Sailors and Mate, as returning from foraging.

Mate. Come, come, bear a hand, my lads. Tho'f the bay is just under our bowsprits, it will take a damn'd deal of tripping to come at it—there's hardly any steering clear of the rocks here. But do we muster all hands ? All right, think ye ?

“ Sailors. All, all, my hearty.”

“ Mate. What Nick Noggin—Ralph Reef—Tom Pipes—Jack Rattlin—Dick Deck—Mat Mast—
“ Sam Surf,—Ten water casks, and a hog ?”

1st Sail. All to a man—besides yourself, and a monkey—the three land lubbers, that edg'd away in the morning, goes for nothing you know—they're all dead may-hap by this.

Mate. Dead ! you be—Why they're friends of the Captain ; and if not brought safe aboard to-night, you may all chance to have a salt eel for your supper—that's all.—Moreover, the young plodding spark, he with the grave, foul weatherface, there, is to man the tight little frigate, Miss Narcissa, what d'ye call her, that is bound with us for Barbadoes. Rot 'em for not keeping under way, I say !

“ 2d Sail. Foolish dogs ! Suppose they are met by “ the Natives.”

Mate. “ Why then the Natives would look plaguy
“ black upon 'em, I do suppose.” But come, let's see if a song will bring 'em to. Let's have a full chorus to the good Merchant Ship, the Achilles, that's wrote by our Captain. “ Where's Tom Pipes ?”

“ Sail.

“ Mate. Come then, pipe all hands. Crack the drums
“ of their ears, my tight fellows. Hail ’em with your “ finging trumpet.”

S O N G.

*The Achilles, though christen’d, good ship, ’tis surmis’d,
From that old Man of War, great Achilles, so priz’d,
Was he, like our vessel, pray, fairly baptiz’d?*

Ti tol lol, &c.

II.

*Poets sung that Achilles—if, now, they’ve an itch
To sing this, future ages may know which is which;
And that one rode in Greece—and the other in Pitch.*

Ti tol lol, &c.

III.

*What tho’ but a Merchant ship—sure our supplies:
Now your Men of War’s gain in a lottery lies,
And how blank they all look, when they can’t get a prize!*

Ti tol lol, &c.

IV.

*What are all their fine names?—when no Rhino’s behind,
The Intrepid, and Lion, look sheepish you’ll find;
Whilst, alas! the poor Æolus can’t raise the wind!*

Ti tol lol, &c.

V.

*Then the Thunderer’s dumb; out of tune the Orpheus;
The Ceres has nothing at all to produce;
And the Eagle, I warrant you, looks like a goose.*

Ti tol lol, &c.

VI.

*But we merchant lads, tho’ the foe we can’t maul,
Nor are paid, like fine king-ships, :o fight at a call,
Why we pay ourselves well, without fighting at all.*

Ti tol tol, &c.

1st Sail. Avaft! look a-head there. Here they come, chas'd by a fleet of black devils.

Midsb. And the devil a fire have I to give 'em. We han't a grain of powder left. What muft we do, lads?

2d Sail. Do? Sheer off to be fure.

" Midsb. What, and leave our companions behind?"

" 1st Sail. Why not? they left us before; fo it comes to the fame thing."

" Midsb. No damn it---I can't---I can't do that neither."

" 3d Sail. Why then we'll leave you. Who the plague is to ftand here, and be peppered by a parcel of favages?"

" Midsb. Why to be fure as it is fo--plague on't-- (reluctantly).

" 1st Sail. Pshaw, mun, they're as fafe as we. Why we're fcarce a cable's length afunder; and they'll keep in our wake now, I warrant 'em."

" Midsb. Why, if you will have it fo--It makes a body's heart yearn to leave the poor fellows in diftrefs, too."

All. Come, bear a hand, Mafter Malinspike!

Midsb. (Reluctantly) Well, if I muft, I muft (going to the other fide and hollowing to Inkle, &c.) Yoho, Lubbers! Crowd all the fail you can, d'ye mind me!

[Exeunt Sailors.

Enter Medium, running across the ftage, as purfued by the Blacks.

Med. Nephew! Trudge! run--scamper! Scour--fly! Zounds, what harm did I ever do to be hunted to death by a pack of bloodhounds? Why Nephew! Oh, confound your long fums in arithmetic! I'll take care of myfelf; and if we muft have any arithmetic, dot and carry one for my money. (runs off)

Enter Inkle and Trudge haftily.

Trudge. Oh! that ever I was born, to leave pen, ink, and powder for this!

Inkle.

Inkle. Trudge, how far are the sailors before us?

Trudge. I'll run and see, Sir, directly.

Inkle. Blockhead, come here. The savages are close upon us; we shall scarce be able to recover our party. Get behind this tuft of trees with me; they'll pass us, and we may then recover our ship with safety.

Trudge. (going behind) Oh! Threadneedle-street, Thread!---

Inkle. Peace.

Trudge. (hiding)—Needle-street. (They hide behind trees. Natives cross. After a long pause. Inkle looks from the trees.)

Inkle. Trudge.

Trudge. Sir. (In a whisper).

Inkle. Are they all gone by?

Trudge. Won't you look and see?

Inkle. (looking round). So all's safe at last. (coming forward). Nothing like policy in these cases; but you'd have run on, like a booby! A tree, I fancy, you'll find, in future, the best resource in a hot pursuit.

Trudge. Oh charming! It's a retreat for a king, Sir. Mr. Medium, however, has not got up in it; your Uncle, Sir, has run on like a booby; and has got up with our party by this time, I take it; who are now most likely at the shore. But what are we to do next, Sir?

Inkle. Reconnoitre a little, and then proceed.

Trudge. Then pray, Sir, proceed to reconnoitre; for the sooner the better.

Inkle. Then look out, d'ye hear, and tell me if you discover any danger.

Trudge. Y-----Ye----s-----Yes But (trembling).
 “As you understand this business better than I, Sir, sup“pose you stick close to my elbow, to give me direc“tions.

“Inkle. Cowardly scoundrel! Do as you are order'd, “Sir,” Well, is the coast clear?

Trudge. Eh! Oh Lord!--Clear? (rubbing his eyes)
 Oh dear! oh dear! the coast will soon be clear enough now, I promise you—The ship is under sail, Sir!

Inkle.

" Inkle. Death and damnation !

" Trudge. Aye, death falls to my lot. I shall starve,
" and go off like a pop-gun."

Inkle. Confusion ! my property carried off in the vessel.

Trudge. All, all, Sir, except me.

" Inkle. Treacherous villains ! My whole effects " lost.

" Trudge. Lord, Sir, any body but you wou'd only
" think of effecting his safety in such a situation."

Inkle. They may report me dead, perhaps, and dispose of my property at the next island.

(The vessel appears under sail.)

Trudge. Ah ! there they go. (A gun fired.)——
That will be the last report we shall ever hear from 'em, I'm afraid.—That's as much as to say, Good bye to ye. And here we are left—two fine, full-grown babes in the wood !

Inkle. What an ill-tim'd accident ! Just too, when my speedy union with Narcissa, at Barbadoes, wou'd so much advance my interests. Something must be hit upon, and speedily ; but what resource ! (thinking)

Trudge. The old one——a tree, Sir——'Tis all we have for it now. What wou'd I give, now, to be perch'd upon a high stool, with our brown desk squeez'd into the pit of my stomach—scribbling away an old parchment !——But all my red ink will be spilt by an old black pin of a negro.

S O N G.

Last Valentine's Day.

*A voyage over seas had not enter'd my head,
Had I known but on which side to butter my bread.
Heigho ! sure I—for hunger must die !
I've sail'd like a booby ; come here in a squall,
Where, alas ! there's no bread to be butter'd at all !
Oho ! I'm a terrible booby !
Oh, what a sad booby am I !*

II.

*In London, what gay chop-house signs in the street !
 But the only sign here is of nothing to eat.
 Heigho ! that I——for hunger should die !
 My Mutton's all lost ; I'm a poor starving elf ;
 And for all the world like a lost mutton myself.
 Oho ! I shall die a lost mutton !
 Oh ! what a lost mutton am I !*

III.

*For a neat slice of beef, I could roar like a bull ;
 And my stomach's so empty, my heart is quite full.
 Heigho ! that I——for hunger should die !
 But, grave without meat, I must here meet my grave,
 For my bacon, I fancy, I never shall save.
 Oho ! I shall n'eer save my bacon !
 I can't save my bacon, not I !*

Trudge. Hum ! I was thinking——

" Inkle. Well, well, what ? Something to our purpose, I hope."

Trudge. I was thinking, Sir——if so many natives cou'd be caught, how much they might fetch at the West India markets !

Inkle. Scoundrel ! is this a time to jest ?

Trudge. No, faith, Sir ! Hunger is too sharp to be jested with. As for me, I shall starve for want of food. Now you may meet a luckier fate : You are able to extract the square root, Sir ; and that's the very best provision you can find here to live upon. But I ! (noise at a distance) Mercy on us ! here they come again.

Inkle. Confusion ! Deserted on one side, and press'd on the other, which way shall I turn ?——This cavern may prove a safe retreat to us for the present. I'll enter, cost what it will.

Trudge. Oh Lord ! no, don't, don't——We shall pay too dear for our lodging, depend on't.

Inkle. This is no time for debating. You are at the mouth of it : lead the way, Trudge.

Trudge.

Trudge. What! go in before your honor! I know my place better, I assure you—I might walk into more mouths than one, perhaps. (Aside)

Inkle. Coward! then follow me. (Noise again)

Trudge. I must, Sir; I must! Ah Trudge, Trudge! what a damn'd hole are you getting into!

[Exeunt into a cavern.]

SCENE, A cave, decorated with skins of wild beasts, feathers, &c. In the middle of the scene, a rude kind of curtain, by way of door to an inner apartment.

Enter Inkle and Trudge, as from the mouth of the Cavern.

Trudge. Why, Sir! Sir? you must be mad to go any farther.

Inkle. So far, at least, we have proceeded with safety. Ha! no bad specimen of savage elegance. These ornaments would be worth something in England--We have little to fear here, I hope: This cave rather bears the pleasing face of a profitable adventure.

Trudge. Very likely, Sir! But, for a pleasing face, it has the curstest ugly mouth I ever saw in my life. Now do, Sir, make off as fast as you can. If we once get clear of the natives houses, we have little to fear from the lions and leopards: for, by the appearance of their parlours, they seem to have kill'd all the wild beasts in the country. Now pray, do, my good Master, take my advice, and run away.

Inkle. Rascal! Talk again of going out, and I'll flea you alive.

Trudge. That's just what I expect for coming in.--All that enter here appear to have had their skin stript over their ears; and ours will be kept for curiosities--We shall stand here, stuff'd, for a couple of white wonders.

Inkle. This curtain seems to lead to another apartment: I'll draw it.

Trudge.

Trudge. No, no, no, don't; don't. We may be call'd to account for disturbing the company: you may get a curtain-lecture, perhaps, sir.

Inkle. Peace, booby, and stand on your guard.

Trudge. Oh! what will become of us! Some grim, seven-foot fellow ready to scalp us.

Inkle. By heaven! a woman!

As the curtain draws, Yarico and Wow ski, discover'd, asleep.

Trudge. A woman! (Aside)—[Loud] But let him come on; I'm ready—dam'me, I don't fear facing the devil himself—Faith it is a woman—fast asleep too.

Inkle. And beautiful as an angel!

Trudge. And, egad! there seems to be a nice, little plump bit in the corner; only she's an angel of rather a darker sort.

Inkle. Hush! keep back—she wakes. [Yarico comes forward—Inkle and Trudge retire to opposite sides of the scene.]

SONG—YARICO.

*When the chace of day is done,
And the shaggy lion's skin,
Which, for us, our warriors win,
Decks our cells, at set of sun;
Worn with toil, with sleep oppress'd,
I press my mossy bed, and sink to rest.*

II.

*Then, once more, I see our train,
With all our chace renew'd again:
Once more, 'tis day,
Once more, our prey
Gnashes his angry teeth, and foams in vain.
Again, in sullen haste, he flies,
Ta'en in the toil, again he lies,
Again he roars—and, in my slumbers, dies.*

Inkle.

Inkle. Our language!

Trudge. Zounds, she has thrown me into a cold sweat.

Yarico. Hark! I heard a noise! Wowski, awake! whence can it proceed! [She wakes Wowski, and they both come forward—Yarico towards Inkle; Wowski towards Trudge.]

Trudge. "Madam your very humble servant."

(To Wowski.)

Yar. Ah! what form is this?—are you a man?

Inkle. True flesh and blood, my charming heathen, I promise you.

Yar. What harmony in his voice! What a shape! How fair his skin too!—(gazing)

Trudge. This must be a lady of quality, by her staring.

Yar. Say, stranger, whence come you?

Inkle. From a far distant island; driven on this coast by distress, and deserted by my companions.

Yar. And do you know the danger that surrounds you here? Our woods are fill'd with beasts of prey---my countrymen too---(yet, I think they cou'dn't find the heart)---might kill you.---It wou'd be a pity if you fell in their way---I think I shou'd weep if you came to any harm.

Trudge. O ho! It's time, I see, to begin making interest with the chambermaid. (Takes Wowski apart.)

Inkle. How wild and beautiful! sure there's magic in her shape, and she has rivetted me to the place. But where shall I look for safety? let me fly, and avoid my death.

Yarico. Oh! no—But—(as if puzzled) well then, die stranger, but don't depart.---But I will try to preserve you; and if you are kill'd, Yarico must die too! Yet, 'tis I alone can save you: your death is certain without my assistance; and indeed, indeed, you shall not want it.

Inkle. My kind Yarico! what means, then, must be us'd for my safety?

Yarico. My cave must conceal you: none enter it, since my father was slain in battle, I will bring you food, by by day, then lead you to our unfrequented groves, by moonlight, to listen to the nightingale. If you should sleep, I'll watch you, and wake you when there's danger.

Inkle. Generous Maid! Then, to you I will owe my life; and whilst it lasts, nothing shall part us.

Yar. And shan't it, shan't it indeed?

Inkle. No, my Yarico! For when an opportunity offers to return to my country, you shall be my companion.

Yar. What! cross the seas!

Inkle. Yes. Help me to discover a vessel, and you shall enjoy wonders. You shall be deck'd in silks, my brave maid, and have a house drawn with horses to carry you.

Yar. Nay, do not laugh at me---but is it so?

Inkle. It is indeed!

Yar. Oh wonder! I wish my countrywomen cou'd see me——But won't your warriors kill us?

Inkle. No, our only danger, on land, is here.

Yar. Then let us retire further into the cave. Come ---your safety is in my keeping.

Inkle. I follow you---Yet, can you run some risque in following me?

D U E T T.

O say, Bonny Lads.

Inkle O say, simple maid, have you form'd any notion
Of all the rude dangers in crossing the ocean?
When winds whistle shrilly, ah! won't they remind you,

To sigh, with regret, for the grot left behind you?
Yar. Ah! no, I cou'd follow, and sail the world over,
Nor think of my grot, when I look at my lover!
The winds which blow round us, your arms for my pillow,
Will lull us to sleep, whilst we're rock'd by each billow.

Inkle. Then, say, lovely lass, what if happily 'spying
“ A rich gallant vessel, with gay colours flying?

B 2

“ Yar.

“ Yar. I'll journey, with thee, love, to where the land narrows,

“ And sling all my cares at my back, with my arrows.”

Both. O say then, my true love, we never will sunder, Nor shrink from the tempest, nor dread the big thunder :

While constant, we'll laugh at all changes of weather,

And journey, all over the world, both together.

[Exeunt; as retiring further into the Cave]

Manent Trudge and Wowfski.

Trudge. Why, you speak English as well as I, my little Wowfski.

Wowfs. Ifs.

Trudge. Ifs ! And you learnt it from a strange man, that tumbled from a big boat, many moons ago, you say ?

Wowfs. Ifs---Teach me---Teach good many.

Trudge. Then, what the devil made 'em so surpriz'd at seeing us ! was he like me ? (Wowfski shakes her head). Not so smart a body, may-hap. Was his face, now, round, and comely, and---eh ! (Stroaking his chin). Was it like mine ?

Wowfs. Like dead leaf---brown and shrivel.

Trudge. Oh, oh, an old shipwreck'd sailor, I warrant. With white and grey hair, eh, my pretty beauty spot ?

Wowfs. Ifs ; all white. When night come, he put it in pocket.

Trudge. Oh ! wore a wig. But the old boy taught you something more than English, I believe.

Wowfs. Ifs.

Trudge. The devil he did ! What was it ?

Wowfs. Teach me put dry grafs, red hot, in hollow white stick.

Trudge. Aye, what was that for ?

Wowfs.

Wowf. Put in my mouth---go poff, poff?

Trudge. Zounds! did he teach you to fmoke?

Wowf. Ifs.

Trudge. And what became of him at last? What did your countrymen do for the poor fellow?

Wowf. Eat him one day---Our chief kill him.

Trudge. Mercy on us! what damn'd stomachs, to swallow a tough old Tar! Though, for the matter of that, there's many of our Captains would eat all they kill I believe! Ah, poor Trudge! your killing comes next.

Wowf. No, no---not you---no---(running to him anxiously) Trudge. No? why what shall I do, if I get in their paws?

Wowf. I fight for you!

Trudge. Will you? Ecod she's a brave, good-natur'd wench! she'll be worth a hundred of your English wives--Whenever they fight on their husband's account, it's with him instead of for him, I fancy. But how the plague am I to live here?

Wowf. I feed you---bring you kid.

S O N G. Wowski.

(One day, I heard Mary say.)

White man, never go away-----

Tell me why need you?

Stay, with your Wowski, stay:

Wowski will feed you.

Cold moons are now coming in:

Ah don't go grieve me!

I'll wrap you in leopard's skin:

White man, don't leave me.

II.

*And when all the sky is blue,
 Sun makes warm weather,
 I'll catch you a Cockatoo,
 Dress you in feather.
 When cold comes, or when 'tis hot,
 Ah don't go grieve me!
 Poor Wowski will be forgot---
 White man, don't leave me!*

Trudge. Zounds! leopard's skin for winter wear, and feathers for a summer's suit! Ha, ha! I shall look like a walking hammer-cloth, at Christmas, and an upright shuttlecock, in the dog days. And for all this, if my master and I find our way to England, you shall be part of our travelling equipage; and, when I get there, I'll give you a couple of snug rooms, on a first floor, and visit you every evening as soon as I come from the counting house. Do you like it?

Wowf. Iſs.

Trudge. Damme, what a flashy fellow I shall seem in the city! I'll get her a white boy to bring up the tea-kettle. Then I'll teach you to write and dress hair.

Wowf. You great man in your country?

Trudge. Oh yes, a very great man. I'm head clerk of the counting-house, and first valet-de-chambre of the dressing-room. I pounce parchments, powder hair, black shoes, ink paper, shave beards, and mend pens. But hold; I had forgot one material point—you ar'nt married, I hope?

Wowf. No: you be my chum-chum!

Trudge. So I will. It's best, however, to be sure of her being single; for Indian husbands are not quite so complaisant as English ones, and the vulgar dogs might think of looking a little after their spouses. Well, as my master seems king of this palace, and has taken his Indian Queen already, I'll e'en be Usher of the black rod here. But you have had a lover or two in your time; eh, Wowski?

Wowf. Oh iſs---great many--I tell you.

DUETT.

D U E T T.

Wowf. *Wampum, Swampum, Yanko, Lanko, Nanko, Pownatowski,
Black men---plenty---twenty---fight for me,
White man, woo you true?*

Trudge. Who?

Wowf. You.

Trudge. Yes, pretty little Wowfski!

Wowf. Then I leave all and follow thee.

Trudge. *Oh then turn about, my little tawny tight one!
Don't you like me?*

Wowf. *Is, you're like the snow!
If you slight one.-----*

Trudge. *Never, not for any white one:
You are beautiful as any sloe.*

Wowf. *Wars, jars, scars can't expose ye,
In our grot-----*

Trudge. So snug and cosy!

Wowf. *Flowers neatly
Pick'd, shall sweetly
Make your bed.*

Trudge. *Coying toying
With a rosy
Posy,
When I'm dosy,
Bear-skin night-caps too shall warm my haud.*

Both. Bear-skin night-caps, &c. &c.

End of the FIRST ACT.

A C T II.

SCENE, The Quay at Barbadoes, with an Inn upon it. People employed in unlading Vessels, carrying Bales of Goods, &c.

Enter several Planters.

1st Plant. I Saw her this morning, gentlemen, you may depend on't. My telescope never fails me. I pop'd upon her as I was taking a peep from my balcony. A brave tight ship, I tell you, bearing down directly for Barbadoes here.

2d Plant. Ods my life ! rare news ! We have not had a vessel arrive in our harbour these six weeks.

3d Plant. And the last brought only madam Narcissa, our Governor's daughter, from England ; with a parcel of lazy, idle, white folks about her. Such cargoes will never do for our Trade, neighbour.

4th Plant. No, no : we want slaves. A terrible dearth of 'em in Barbadoes, lately ! But your dingy passengers for my money. Give me a vessel like a collier, where all the lading tumbles out as black as my hat. But are you sure, now, you ar'nt mistaken ? (to 1st Planter)

1st Plant. Mistaken ! 'tbud, do you doubt my glass ? I can discover a gull by it six leagues off : I could see every thing as plain as if I was on board.

2d Plant. Indeed ! and what were her colours ?

1st Plant. Um ! why English——or Dutch——or French——I don't exactly remember.

3d Plant. What were the sailors aboard ?

1st Plant. Eh ! why they were English too——or Dutch——or French——I can't perfectly recollect.

4th Plant.

4th Plant. Your glass, neighbour, is a little like a glass too much: it makes you forget every thing you ought to remember. (Cry without, "A sail, a sail!")

1st Plant. Egad but I'm right tho'. Now gentlemen!

All. Aye, aye; the devil take the hindmost.

Exeunt hastily.

Enter Narcissa and Patty.

S O N G.

*Freshly now the breeze is blowing;
As yon ship at anchor rides,
Sullen waves incessant flowing,
Rudely dash against the sides:
So my heart, its course impeded,
Beats in my perturbed breast;
Doubts, like waves by waves succeeded,
Rise, and still deny it rest.*

Patty. Well, Ma'am, as I was saying——

Nar. Well, say no more of what you were saying-- Sure, Patty, you forget where you are: a little caution will be necessary now, I think.

Patty. Lord, Madam, how is it possible to help talking? We are in Barbadoes here to be sure-- but then, Ma'am, one may let out a little in a private morning's walk by ourselves.

Nar. Nay, it's the same thing with you in doors.

" Patty. Why, to say the truth, M'am, tho' we do live in your father's house—Sir Christopher Curry, the grand Governor that governs all Barbadoes—and a terrible positive governor he is to be sure—yet, he'll find it a difficult matter to govern a chambermaid's tongue, I believe.

" Nar. That I am sure of, Patty; for it runs as rapidly as the tide which brought us from England.

" Patty. Very true, Ma'am; and, like the tide, it stops for no man.

" Nar.

Nar. Well, well, let it run as you please ; only for my sake, take care it don't run away with you.

Patty. Oh, Ma'am, it has been too well train'd in the course of conversation, I promise you ; and if ever it says any thing to your disadvantage, my name is not Patty Prink."---I never blab, Ma'am, never, as I hope for a gown.

Nar. And your never blabbing, as you call it, depends chiefly on that hope, I believe. The unlocking my chest, locks up all your faculties. An old silk gown makes you turn your back on all my secrets ; a large bonnet blinds your eyes, and a fashionable high handkerchief covers your ears, and stops your mouth at once, Patty,

Patty. Dear Ma'am, how can you think a body so mercenary ! Am I always teasing you about gowns and gew-gaws, and fallals and finery ? Or do you take me for a conjuror, that nothing will come out of my mouth but ribbons ? I have told the story of our voyage, indeed, to old Guzzle, the butler, who is very inquisitive ; and, between ourselves, is the ugliest old Quiz I ever saw in my life.

Nar. Well, well, I have seen him ; pitted with the small-pox and a red face.

Patty. Right, Ma'am. It's for all the world like his master's cellar, full of holes and liquor. But when he asks me what you and I think of the matter, why I look wise, and cry like other wise people who have nothing to say---All's for the best.

Nar. And, thus, you lead him to imagine I am but little inclin'd to the match.

Patty. Lord, Ma'am, how could that be ? Why, I never said a word about Captain Campley.

Nar. Hush ! hush, for heaven's sake.

Patty. Ay ! there it is now.---There, Ma'am, I'm as mute as a mack'rel--That name strikes me dumb in a moment. I don't know how it is, but Captain Campley somehow or other has the knack of stopping my mouth oftener than any body else, Ma'am.

Nar. His name again ! ---Consider.--Never mention it ; I desire you.

Patty.

Patty. Not I, Ma'am, not I. But if our voyage from England was so pleasant, it wasn't owing to Mr. Inkle, I'm certain. He didn't play the fiddle in our cabin, and dance on the deck, and come languishing with a glass of warm water in his hand, when we were sea-sick. Ah, Ma'am, that water warm'd your heart, I'm confident. Mr. Inkle! No, No; Captain Cam——“there, he “has stopped my mouth again, Ma'am.”

Nar. There is no end to this! Remember, Patty, keep your secrecy, or you entirely lose my favour.

Patty. Never fear me, Ma'am. But if somebody I know is not acquainted with the Governor, there's such a thing as dancing at balls, and squeezing hands when you lead up, and squeezing them again when you cast down, and walking on the Quay in a morning.

“Nar. No more of this!”

Patty. Oh, I won't utter a syllable. “I'll go, and “take a turn on the Quay by myself, if you think proper.” (archly)- But remember, I'm as close as a patch, box. Mum's the word, Ma'am, I promise you.

S O N G.

*This maxim let ev'ry one hear,
Proclaim'd from the North to the South;
Whatever comes in at your ear,
Shou'd never run out at your mouth.
We servants, like servants of state,
Shou'd listen to all, and be dumb;
Let others harrangue and debate,
We look wise---shake our heads.--and are mum.*

II.

*The Judge in dull dignity drest,
In silence hears barristers preach;
And then to prove silence is best,
He'll get up, and give them a specch.*

By

*By saying but little, the maid
 Will keep her swain under her thumb ;
 And the lover, that's true to his trade,
 Is certain to kiss, and cry mum.* [Exit]

Nar. " This heedless wench, every time she speaks, I dread a discovery of my sentiments," How awkward is my present situation ! Promis'd to one, who, perhaps, may never again be heard of ; and who, I am sure, if he ever appears to claim me, will do it merely on the score of interest---press'd too by another, who has already, I fear, too much interest in my heart—what can I do ? What plan can I follow ?

Enter Campley.

Camp. Follow my advice, Narcissa, by all means. Enlist with me, under the best banners in the world. General Hymen for my money ! little Cupid's his drummer : he has been beating a round rub-a-dub on our hearts, and we have only to obey the word of command, fall into the ranks of matrimony, and march through life together.

" Nar. Halt ! halt, Captain ! you march too quick ; besides, you make matrimony a mere parade."

" Camp. Faith, I believe, many make it so at present. But we are volunteers, Narcissa ! and I am for actual service, I promise you."

Nar. Then consider our situation.

Camp. That has been duly consider'd. In short, the case stands exactly thus—your intended spouse is all for money : I am all for love : He is a rich rogue : I am rather a poor honest fellow. He wou'd pocket your fortune ; I will take you without a fortune in your pocket.

" Nar. But where's Mr. Inkle's view of interest ? Hasn't he run away from me ?

" Camp. And I am ready to run away with you—
 " you won't always meet with such an offer on an emer" gency."

Nar.

Nar. Oh! I am sensible of the favour, most gallant Captain Campley; and my father, no doubt, will be very much oblig'd to you.

Camp. Aye, there's the devil of it! Sir Christopher Curry's confounded good character—knocks me up at once. Yet I am not acquainted with him neither; not known to him, even by sight; being here only a private gentleman on a visit to my old relation, out of regimentals, and so forth; and not introduc'd to the Governor as other officers of the place: But then the report of his hospitality—his odd, blunt, whimsical friendship—his whole behaviour——

Nar. All stare you in the face, eh, Campley?

Camp. They do till they put me out of countenance: But then again, when I stare you in the face, I can't think I have any reason to be ashamed of my proceedings—I stick here between my Love and my Principle, like a song between a toast and a sentiment.

Nar. And if your love and your principle were put in the scales, you doubt which would weigh most?

Camp. Oh, no! I shou'd act like a rogue, and let principle kick the beam: For love, Narcissa, is as heavy as lead, and like a bullet from a pistol, cou'd never go thro' the heart, if it wanted weight.

Nar. Or rather like the pistol itself, that often goes off without any harm done. Your fire must end in smoke I believe.

Camp. Never whilst——

Nar. Nay, a truce to protestations at present. What signifies talking to me, when you have such opposition from others? Why hover about the city, instead of boldly attacking the guard? Wheel about, captain! face the enemy! March! Charge! Rout 'em---Drive 'em before you, and then——

Camp. And then——

Nar. Lud ha' mercy on the poor city!

SONG.

S O N G.—RONDEAU.

“ Since ’tis vain to think of flying.”

*Mars wou’d oft, his conquest over,
To the Cyprian Goddess yield;
Venus gloried in a lover,
Who, like him, cou’d brave the field.
Mars wou’d oft, &c.*

II.

*In the cause of battles hearty,
Still the God wou’d strive to prove,
He who fac’d an adverse party,
Fittest was to meet his love.
Mars wou’d oft, &c.*

III.

*Hear then, Captains, ye who bluster,
Hear the God of War declare,
Cowards never can pass muster;
Courage only wins the fair.
Mars wou’d oft, &c.*

Enter Patty, hastily.

Patty. Oh lud, Ma’am, I’m frighten’d out of my wits! sure as I’m alive, Ma’am, Mr. Inkle is not dead; I saw his man, Ma’am, just now, coming ashore in a boat with other passengers, from the vessel that’s come to the island.

“ Nar. Then one way or other I must determine.”

“ Patty. But, pray Ma’am, don’t tell the Captain; “ I’m sure he’ll stick poor Trudge in his passion; and “ he’s the best natur’d, peaceable, kind, loving soul
“ in the world.” [Exit Patty.

Nar. (to Camp.) Look’ye, Mr. Campley, something has happen’d which makes me wave ceremonies.--If you mean mean to apply to my father, remember that delays are dangerous.

Camp. Indeed !

Nar. I mayn't be always in the same mind, you know. (Smiling.)

Camp. Nay then---Gad, I'm almost afraid too--but living in this state of doubt is torment. I'll e'en put a good face on the matter; cock my hat; make my bow; and try to reason the Governor into compliance. Faint heart never won a fair Lady.

S O N G.

*Why shou'd I vain fears discover,
Prove a dying, sighing swain ?
Why turn shilly-shally lover,
Only to prolong my pain ?*

II.

*When we woo the dear enslaver,
Boldly ask and she will grant ;
How should we obtain a favour,
But by telling what we want ?*

III.

*Should the nymph be found complying,
Nearly then the battle's won ;
Parents think 'tis vain denying,
When half the work is fairly done.*

[Exeunt.

Enter Trudge and Wowski (as from the ship) with a dirty runner to one of the inns.

Run. This way, Sir ; if you will let me recommend—

Trudge. Come along, Wows ! Take care of your furs, and your feathers, my girl.

Wowf.

Wowf. Ifs.

Trudge. That's right.---Somebody might steal 'em, perhaps.

Wowf. Steal!---What that?

Trudge. Oh Lord! see what one loses by not being born in a Christian country.

Run. If you wou'd, Sir, but mention to your master, the house that belongs to my master; the best accommodations on the quay.—

Trudge. What's your sign, my lad?

Run. The Crown, Sir---Here it is.

Trudge. Well, get us a room for half an hour, and we'll come: and harkee! let it be light and airy, d'ye hear? My master has been us'd to your open apartments lately.

Run. Depend on it.---Much oblig'd to you, Sir.
[Exit.

Wowf. Who be that fine man? He great Prince?

Trudge. A Prince---Ha? ha!---No, not quite a Prince---but he belongs to the Crown. But how do you like this, Wows? Isn't it fine?

Wowf. Wonder!

Trudge. Fine men, eh!

Wowf. Ifs! all white; like you.

Trudge. Yes, all the fine men are like me: As different from your people as powder and ink, or paper and blacking.

Wowf. And fine lady---Face like snow.

Trudge. What! the fine ladies complexions? Oh, yes, exactly; for too much heat very often dissolves 'em! Then their drefs, too.

Wowf. Your countrymen drefs so?

Trudge. Better, better a great deal. Why, a young flashy Englishman will sometimes carry a whole fortune on his back. But did you mind the women? All here—and there; (pointing before and behind) they have it all from us in England.---And then the fine things they carry on their heads, Wowski.

Wowf. Ifs. One lady carry good fish---so fine, she call every body to look at her.

Trudge.

Trudge. Pshaw ! an old woman bawling flounders. But the fine girls we meet, here, on the quay--so round, and so plump !

Wowf. You not love me now.

Trudge. Not love you ! Zounds, have not I given you proofs ?

Wowf. Ifs. Great many : But now you get here, you forget poor Wowski !

Trudge. Not I : I'll stick to you like wax.

Wowf. Ah ! I fear ! What make you love me now ?

Trudge. Gratitude, to be sure.

Wowf. What that ?

Trudge. Ha ! this it is, now, to live without education. The poor dull devils of her country are all in the practice of gratitude, without finding out what it means ; while we can tell the meaning of it, with little or no practice at all.—Lord, Lord, what a fine advantage Christian learning is ! Hark'ee, Wows !

Wowf. Ifs.

Trudge. Now we've accomplish'd our landing, I'll accomplish you. You remember the instructions I gave you on the voyage ?

Wowf. Ifs.

Trudge. Let's see now—What are you to do, when I introduce you to the Nobility, Gentry, and others--of my acquaintance ?

Wowf. Make believe sit down ; then get up.

Trudge. Let me see you do it. [She makes a low curtesy.] Very well ! And how are you to recommend yourself, when you have nothing to say, amongst all our great friends ?

Wowf. Grin—shew my teeth.

Trudge. Right ! they'll think you've liv'd with people of fashion. But suppose you meet an old shabby friend in misfortune, that you don't wish to be seen to speak to—what wou'd you do ?

Wowf. Look blind—not see him.

Trudge. Why wou'd you do that ?

Wowf. 'Cause I can't see good friend in distress.

Trudge. That's a good girl ! and I wish every body cou'd boast of so kinda motive for such cursed cruel behaviour.

haviour.—Lord ! how some of your flashy banker's clerks have cut me in Threadneedle-street.—But come, tho' we have got among fine folks, here, in an English settlement, I won't be aſham'd of my old acquaintance : yet, for my own part, I ſhould not be ſorry, now, to ſee my old friend with a new face.--Odiſbobs ! I ſee Mr. Inkle--Go in, Wows ;—call for what you like beſt.

Wowſ. Then, I call for you—ah ! I fear I not ſee you often now. But you come ſoon——

S O N G.

*Remember when we walk'd alone,
And heard, ſo gruff, the lion growl ;
And when the moon ſo bright it ſhone,
We ſaw the wolf look up and howl ;
I led you well, ſafe to our cell,
While, tremblingly,
You ſaid to me,
---And kiſs'd ſo ſweet—dear Wowſki tell,
How cou'd I live without ye ?*

II.

*But now you come acroſs the ſea,
And tell me here no monſters roar ;
You'll walk alone and leave poor me,
When wolves to fright you howl no more.
Bnt ah ! think well on our old cell,
Where tremblingly
You kiſs'd poor me—
Perhaps you'll ſay—dear Wowſki tell,
How can I live without ye ?
[Exit Wowſki.]*

Trudge. Eh ! oh ! my maſter's talking to ſomebody on the quay. Who have we here !

Enter.

Enter First Planter.

Plant. Hark'ee, young man ! Is that young Indian of your's going to our market ?

Trudge. Not she—she never went to market in all her life.

Plant. I mean, is she for our sale of slaves ? Our Black Fair ?

Trudge. A Black fair, ! Ha ! ha ! ha ! You hold it on a brown green, I suppose.

Plant. She's your slave, I take it ?

Trudge. Yes ; and I'm her humble servant, I take it.

Plant. Aye, aye, natural enough at sea.—But at how much do you value her ?

Trudge. Just as much as she has saved me—My own life.

Plant. Pshaw ! you mean to sell her ?

Trudge. (stairing) Zounds ! what a devil of a fellow ! Sell Wows !—my poor, dear, dingy wife !

Plant. Come, come, I've heard your story from the ship.—Don't let's haggle ; I'll bid as fair as any trader amongst us : But no tricks upon travellers, young man, to raise your price.—Your wife, indeed ! Why she's no Christian ?

Trudge. No ; but I am ; so I shall do as I'd be done by, Master Black-market : and, if you were a good one yourself, you'd know, that fellow-feeling for a poor body, who wants your help, is the noblest mark of our religion.—I wou'd'nt be articled clerk to such a fellow for the world.

Plant. Hey-day ! The booby's in love with her ! Why, sure, friend, you wou'd not live here with a Black ?

Trudge. Plague on't ; there it is. I shall be laugh'd out of my honesty, here.— But you may be jogging, friend ; I may feel a little queer, perhaps, at showing her face—but, dam'me, if ever I do any thing to make me ashamed of showing my own.

Plant. Why, I tell you, her very complexion—

Trudge. Rot her complexion.—I'll tell you what, Mr. Fair trader : If your head and heart were to change places, I've a notion you'd be as black in the face as an ink-bottle.

Plant. Pshaw! The fellow's a fool--a rude rascal--he ought to be sent back to the savages, again. He's not fit to live among us christians. [Exit. Planter.

"Trudge. Christians! ah! tender souls they are, to be sure."

S O N G.

American Tune.

"*Christians are so good, they say,
Tender souls as e'er can be!
Let them credit it who may;
What they're made of let us see.*

II.

"*Christian drovers, charming trade!
Who so careful cattle drive;
And the tender Christian maid,
Sweetly skinning eels alive.*

III.

"*Tender tonish dames, who take
Whip in hand, and drive like males,
Have thetr ponies nick'd---to make
The pretty creatures cock their tails!*

IV.

"*Christian boys will shy at cocks,
Worry dogs, hunt cats, kill flies;
Christian Lords will learn to box,
And give their noble friend black eyes."*

Oh, here he is at last.

Enter.

Enter Inkle, and a second Planter.

Inkle. Nay, Sir, I understand your customs well : your Indian markets are not unknown to me.

2d. Plant. And, as you seem to understand business, I need not tell you that dispatch is the soul of it. Her name you say is—

Inkle. Yarico : But urge this no more, I beg you. I must not listen to it : For to speak freely, her anxious care of me demands, that here,—though here it may seem strange—I should avow my love for her.

Plant. Lord help you, for a merchant!—"What a pretty figure you would cut upon Change"—It's the first time I ever heard a trader talk of love ; except, indeed, the love of trade, and the love of the Sweet Molly, my ship.

Inkle. Then, Sir, you cannot feel my situation.

Plant. Oh yes, I can ! We have a hundred such cases just after a voyage ; but they never last long on land. It's amazing how constant a young man is in a ship ! But, in two words, Will you dispose of her, or no ?

Inkle. In two words then, meet me here at noon, and we'll speak further on this subject : and lest you think I trifle with your business, hear why I wish this pause. Chance threw me, on my passage to your island, among a savage people. Deserted,—defenceless,—cut off from my companions,—my life at stake—to this young creature I owe my preservation ;—she found me, like a dying bough, torn from its kindred branches ; which, as it droop'd, she moisten'd with her tears.

Plant. Nay, nay, talk like a man of this world.

Inkle. Your patience.—And yet your interruption goes to my present feelings ; for on our sail to this your island—the thoughts of time mispent—doubt---fears—for call it what you will---have much perplex'd me ; and as your spires arose, reflections still rose with them ; or here, Sir, lie my interests, great connections, and other weighty matters—which now I need not mention—

Plant. But which her presence here will mar.

Inkle. Even so—And yet the gratitude I owe her !

Plant. Pshaw ! So because she preserv'd your life, your gratitude is to make you give up all you have to live upon.

Inkle. Why in that light indeed---This never struck me yet, I'll think on't.

Plant. Aye, aye, do so---Why what return can the wench wish more than taking her from a wild, idle, savage people, and providing for her, here, with reputable hard work, in a genteel, polished, tender, christian country ?

Inkle. Well, Sir, at noon——

Plant. I'll meet you---but remember, young gentleman, you must get her off your hands--you must indeed.----I shall have her a bargain, I see that—your servant!--Zounds how late it is--but never be put out of your way for a woman---I must run---my wife will play the devil with me for keeping breakfast. [Exit.

Inkle. Trudge.

Trudge. Sir !

Inkle. Have you provided a proper apartment ?

Trudge. Yes, Sir, at the Crown here ; a neat, spruce room they tell me. You have not seen such a convenient lodging this good while, I believe.

Inkle. Are there no better inns in the town ?

Trudge. Um---Why there's the Lion, I hear, and the Bear, and the Boar—but we saw them at the door of all our late lodgings, and found but bad accommodations within, Sir.

Inkle. Well, run to the end of the quay, and conduct Yarico hither. The road is straight before you : you can't miss it.

Trudge. Very well, Sir. What a fine thing it is to turn one's back on a master, without running into a wolf's belly ! One can follow one's nose on a message here, and be sure it won't be bit off by the way. [Exit.

Inkle. Let me reflect a little. “ This honest planter counsils well.” Part with her--“ What is there in it “ which cannot easily be justified ? ” Justified !--Pshaw ! My interest, honour, engagements to Narcissa, all demand it. My father's precepts, too--I can remember, when when I was a boy, what pains he took to mould me!--School'd me from morn to night--and still the burthen of his song was--Prudence! Prudence, Thomas, and you'll rise.--Early he taught me numbers; which he said and he said rightly--wou'd give me a quick view of loss and profit; and banish from my mind those idle impulses of passion, which mark young thoughtless spendthrifts. His maxims rooted in my heart, and as I grew--they grew; till I was reckoned, among our friends, a steady, sober, solid, good young man; and all the neighbours call'd me the prudent Mr. Thomas. And shall I now, at once, kick down the character, which I have rais'd so warily?---Part with her,---"sell her,"---The thought once struck me in our cabin, as she lay sleeping by me; but, in her slumbers, she pass'd her arm around me, murmur'd a blessing on my name, and broke my meditations.

Enter Yarico and Trudge.

Yar. My Love!

Trudge. I have been showing her all the wigs and bales of goods we met on the quay, Sir.

Yar. Oh! I have feasted my eyes on wonders.

Trudge. And I'll go feast on a slice of beef, in the inn, here. [Exit.

Yar. My mind has been so busy, that I almost forgot even you. I wish you had staid with me--You wou'd have seen such fights!

Inkle. Those fights are grown familiar to me, Yarico.

Yar. And yet I wish they were not--You might partake my pleasures--but now again, methinks, I will not wish so--for, with too much gazing, you might neglect poor Yarico.

Inkle. Nay, nay, my care is still for you.

Yar. I'm sure it is: and if I thought it was not, I'd tell you tales about our poor old grot--Bid you remember our Palm-tree near the brook, where in the shade you often stretched yourself, while I would take your head upon my lap, and sing my love to sleep. I know you'll love me then.

S O N G.

Our grotto was the sweetest place !

*The bending bows, with fragrance blowing,
Would check the brook's impetuous pace,
Which murmur'd to be stopt from flowing.
'Twas there we met, and gazed our fill.
Ah ! think on this, and love me still.*

II.

*'Twas then my bosom first knew fear,
—Fear, to an Indian maid a stranger---
The war-song, arrows, hatchet, spear,
All warn'd me of my lover's danger,
For him did cares my bosom fill ;
Ah ! think on this, and love me still.*

III.

*“ For him, by day, with care conceal'd,
“ To search for food I climb'd the mountain ;
“ And when the night no form reveal'd,
“ Jocund we sought the bubbling fountain.
“ Then, then would joy my bosom fill ;
“ Ah ! think on this, and love me still.”* [Exeunt.

SCENE, An apartment in the house of Sir Christopher Curry.

Enter. Sir Christopher and Medium.

Sir. Chr. I tell you, old Medium, you are all wrong.
Plague on your doubts ! Inkle shall have my Narcissa.
Poor

Poor fellow! I dare say he's finely chagrined at this temporary parting—Eat up with the blue devils, I warrant.

Med. Eat up by the black devils, I warrant; for I left him in hellish hungry company.

Sir. Chr. Pshaw! he'll arrive with the next vessel, depend on't—besides, have not I had this in view ever since they were children? I must and will have it so, I tell you. Is not it, as it were, a marriage made above? They shall meet, I'm positive.

Med. Shall they? Then they must meet where the marriage was made; for hang me, if I think it will ever happen below.

Sir. Chr. Ha!—and if that is the case--hang me, if I think you'll ever be at the celebration of it.

Med. Yet, let me tell you, Sir Christopher Curry, my character is as unsullied as a sheet of white paper.

Sir Chr. Well said, old fool's-cap! and it's as mere a blank as a sheet of white paper. “It bears the traces “ of neither a bad nor a good hand upon it. Zounds!
“ I had rather be a walking libel on honesty, than sit “ down a blank in the library of the world.

“ Med. Well, it is not for me to boast of virtues:
“ That's a vice I never give into.

“ Sir Chr. Your virtues! zounds, what are they?

“ Med. I am not addicted to passion--that at least,
“ Sir Christopher---

“ Sir Chr. Is like all your other virtues--A negative one.” You are honest, old Medium, by comparison, just as a fellow sentenc'd to transportation is happier than his companion condemned to the gallows---Very worthy, because you are no rogue; “a good friend, because you never bear malice;” Tender hearted, because you never go to fires and executions; and an affectionate father and husband, because you never pinch your children, or kick your wife out of bed.

Med. And that, as the world goes, is more than every man can say for himself. Yet, since you force me to speak my positive qualities--but, no matter,--you remember me in London; “and know, there was scarcely “ a laud-

“ a laudible institution in town, without my name in the “ list. Hav’n’t I given more tickets to recommend the “ lopping off legs than any Governor of our Hospital?
 “ and didn’t I, as Member of the Humane Society, bring a man out of the New River, who, it was afterwards found, had done me an injury?

Sir Chr. And, dam’ me, If I wou’d not kick any man into the New River that had done me an injury. There’s the difference of our honesty. Oons! if you want to be an honest fellow, act from the impulse of nature. Why, you have no more gall than a pigeon.

“ Med. That, I think, is pretty evident in my pri“ vate life.---Patience, patience you must own, Sir “ Christopher, is a virtue. And I have sat and seen my “ best friend abus’d, with as much quiet patience as any “ Christian in Christendom.

“ Sir Chr. And I’d quarrel with any man, that “ abus’d my friend in my company. Offending my “ ears is as bad as boxing them.”

Med. “ Ha! You’re always so hasty; among the hodge-podge of your foibles, passion is always predominant.

Sir Chr. So much the better.---“ A natural man, “ unseasoned with passion, is as uncommon as a dish of “ hodge-podge without pepper; and devilish insipid too, “ old Medium.”---Foibles, quotha? foibles are foils that give additional lustre to the gems of virtue. You have not so many foils as I, perhaps.

Med. And, what’s more, I don’t want ’em, Sir
 Christopher, I thank you.

Sir Chr. Very true; for the devil a gem have you to set off with ’em.

Med. Well, well; I never mention errors; that, I flatter myself, is no disagreeable quality.---It don’t become me to say you are hot.

Sir Chr. ’Sblood! but it does become you: it becomes every man, especially an Englishman, to speak the dictates of his heart.

SONG.

S O N G.

“ O give me your plain dealing Fellows,
 “ Who never from honesty shrink;
 “ Not thinking on all they should tell us,
 “ But telling us all that they think.

II.

“ Truth from man flows like wine from a bottle,
 “ His free spoken heart's a full cup;
 “ But, when truth sticks half way in the throttle, “ Man's worse than a bottle cork'd up.

III.

“ Complaisance, is a Gingerbread creature——
 “ Us'd for show, like a watch, by each spark;
 “ But truth is a golden repeater,
 “ That sets a man right in the dark.”

“ Med. But suppose his heart dictates to any one to “ knock up your friend, Sir Christopher?

“ Sir Chr. Eh!----why----then it becomes me to “ knock him down.

“ Med. Mercy on us! If that was the consequence “ of scandal in England now-a-days, all our fine gentle“ men would cut each other's throats over a bottle; and,
 “ if extended to the card-tables, our routs would be “ fuller of black eyes, than black aces.”

Enter Servant.

Serv. An English vessel, Sir, just arrived in the harbour.

Sir Chr. A vessel! Od's my life!----Now for the news---If it is but as I hope---Any dispatches?

Serv. This letter, Sir, brought by a sailor from the quay,

[Exit.
 “ Sir

44 INKLE AND YARICO:

Sir Chr. Now for it! If Inkle is but amongst 'em---Zounds! I'm all in a flutter; my hand shakes
 "like an aspin leaf; and you, you old fool, are as stiff
 "and steady as an oak. Why arn't you like me---all
 "tiptoe---all nerves?-----

Med. Well, read, Sir Christopher."

Sir Chr. (opening the letter.) Huzza! here it is. He's safe---safe and sound at Barbadoes.

(Reading.)-----Sir,

My master, Mr. Inkle, is just arriv'd in your harbour.

Here, read, read! old Medium---

Med. (Reading.) Um'---Your harbour;---we were taken up by an English vessel on the 14th ult^o. He only waits till I have puff'd his hair, to pay his respects to you, and Miss Narcissa: In the mean time, he has order'd me to brush up this letter for your honour from

Your humble Servant, to command,

Timothy Trudge.

Sir Chr. Hey day! Here's a stile! the voyage has jumbled the fellow's brains out of their places; the water has made his head turn round. But no matter; mine turns round, too. I'll go and prepare Narcissa directly, they shall be married, flap-dash, as soon as he comes from the quay. From Neptune to Hymen; from the hammock to the bridal bed---Ha! old boy!

Med. Well, well; don't flurry yourself---you're so hot!

Sir Chr. Hot! blood, arn't I in the West Indies? Arn't I Governor of Barbadoes? He shall have her as soon as he sets his foot on shore. "But plague on't, he's so slow."---She shall rise to him like Venus out of the sea. His hair puff'd! He ought to have been puffing, here, out of breath, by this time.

Med. Very true; but Venus's husband is always supposed to be lame, you know, Sir Christopher.

Sir

Sir Chr. Well, now do, my good fellow, run down to the shore, and see what detains him. [Hurrying him off.

Med. Well, well; I will, I will. [Exit.

Sir Chr. In the mean time, I'll get ready Narcissa, and all shall be concluded in a second. My heart's set upon it.----Poor fellow! after all his rumbles, and tumbles, and jumbles, and fits of despair--I shall be rejoic'd to see him. I have not seen him since he was that high.---But, zounds! he's so tardy!

Enter Servant.

Serv. A strange gentleman, Sir, come from the quay, desires to see you.

Sir Chr. From the quay? Od's my life!----'Tis he---'Tis Inkle! Show him up, directly. (Exit Servant.) The rogue is expeditious after all.--I'm so happy.

Enter Campley.

My dear Fellow! [Embracing him---shakes hands.] I'm rejoic'd to see you. Welcome; welcome here, with all my soul!

Camp. This reception, Sir Christopher, is beyond my warmest wishes---Unknown to you---

Sir Chr. Aye, aye; we shall be better acquainted by and by. Well, and how, eh! Tell me!--But old Medium and I have talk'd over your affair a hundred times a day, ever since Narcissa arriv'd.

Camp. You surprize me! Are you then really acquainted with the whole affair?

Sir Chr. Every tittle.

Camp. And, can you, Sir, pardon what is past?---

Sir Chr. Pooh! how could you help it?

Camp. Very true---failing in the same ship--and---

Sir Chr. Aye, aye; but we have had a hundred conjectures about you. Your despair and distress, and all that----Your's must have been a damn'd situation, to say the truth.

Camp. Cruel indeed, Sir Christopher! and I flatter myself will move your compassion. I have been been almost inclin'd to despair, indeed, as you say, but when you consider the past state of my mind—the black prospect before me.—

Sir Chr. Ha! ha! Black enough, I dare say.

Camp. The difficulty I have felt in bringing myself face to face to you.

Sir Chr. That I am convinc'd of—but I knew you wou'd come the first opportunity.

Camp. Very true: yet the distance between the Governor of Barbadoes and myself. [Bowing.]

Sir Chr. Yes—a devilish way asunder.

Camp. Granted, Sir: which has distress'd me with the cruellest doubts as to our meeting.

Sir Chr. It was a tofs up.

Camp. The old Gentleman seems devilish kind.— Now to soften him. [Aside] Perhaps, Sir, in your younger days, you may have been in the same situation yourself.

Sir Chr. Who? I! sblood! no, never in my life.

Camp. I wish you had, with all my soul, Sir Christopher.

Sir Chr. Upon my soul, Sir, I am very much obliged to you. (Bowing)

Camp. As what I now mention might have greater weight with you.

Sir Chr. Pooh! prithee! I tell you I pitied you from the bottom of my heart.

Camp. Indeed! “Had you but been kind enough to have sent to me, how happy should I have been in attending your commands!”

“Sir Chr. I believe you wou'd, egad—ha! ha! sent to you! Very well! ha! ha! ha! A dry rogue! You'd have been ready enough to come my boy, I dare say. (Laughing.)”

Camp. “But now, Sir;” if, with your leave, I may still venture to mention Miss Narcissa—

Sir Chr. An impatient, sensible young dog! like me to a hair! Set your heart at rest, my boy. She's your's; your's before to-morrow morning.

Camp. Amazement! I can scarce believe my senses.

Sir

Sir Chr. Zounds ! you ought to be ought of your senses : but dispatch—make short work of it, ever while you live, my boy.

Enter Narcissa and Patty.

Here girl : here's your swain. [To Nar.

Camp. I just parted with my Narcissa, on the quay, Sir.

Sir Chr. Did you ! Ah, fly dog----had a meeting before you came to the old Gentleman.---But here---Take him, and make much of him--and, for fear of further separations, you shall e'en be tack'd together directly. What say you, girl ?

Camp. Will my Narcissa consent to my happiness ?

Nar. I always obey my father's commands, with pleasure, Sir.

Sir Chr. Od ! I'm so happy, I hardly know which way to turn ; but we'll have the carriage directly ; drive down to the quay ; trundle old Spintext into church ; and hey for matrimony !

Camp. With all my heart, Sir Christopher ; the sooner the better.

Sir CHRISTOPHER, CAMPLEY, NARCISSA, PATTY.

Sir Chr. *Your Colinettes, and Arriettes,
Your Damons of the grove,
Who like Fallals, and Pastorals,
Waste years in love !
But modern folks know better jokes,
And, courting once begun,
To church they hop at once---and pop---
Egad, all's done !*

All. *In life we prance a country dance,
Where every couple stands ;
Their partners set---a while curvett---
But soon join hands.*

Nar.

Nar. *When at our feet, so trim and neat,
 The powder'd lover sues,
 He vows he dies, the lady sighs,
 But can't refuse.
 Ah! how can she unmov'd e'er see
 Her swain his death incur?
 If once the Squire is seen expire,
 He lives with her.*

All. In life, &c. &c.

Patty. *When John and Bet are fairly met,
 John boldly tries his luck;
 He steals a buss, without more fuss,
 The bargain's struck.
 Whilst things below are going so,
 Is Betty pray to blame?
 Who knows up stairs, her mistress fares
 Just, just the same.*

All. In life we prance, &c. &c. [Exeunt]

End of the SECOND ACT.

A C T III.

SCENE I. The Quay.Enter Patty.

MERCY on us ! what a walk I have had of it ! Well, matters go on swimmingly at the governor's--- The old gentleman has order'd the carriage, and the young couple will be whisk'd, here, to church, in a quarter of an hour. My business is to prevent young sober-fides, young Inkle, from appearing, to interrupt the ceremony.--Ha ! here's the Crown, where I hear he is hous'd. So now to find Trudge, and trump up a story, in the true stile of a chambermaid. (Goes into the house.) (Patty within) I tell you it don't signify, and I will come up. (Trudge within.) But it does signify, and you can't come up.

Re-enter Patty, with Trudge.

Patty. You had better say at once, I shan't.

Trudge. Well then you shan't.

Patty. Savage ! Pretty behaviour you have pick'd up amongst the Hyttypots ! Your London civility, like London itself, will soon be lost in smoke, Mr. Trudge ; and the politeness you have studied so long in Thread-needle-street, blotted out by the blacks you have been living with.

Trudge. No such thing ; I practis'd my politeness all the while I was in the woods. Our very lodging taught me good manners ; for I could never bring myself to go into it without bowing.

Patty. Don't tell me ! A mighty civil reception you give a body, truly, after a six weeks parting :

D

Trudge.

Trudge. Gad, you're right; I am a little out here, to be sure. (Kisses her.) Well, how do you do?

Patty. Pshaw, fellow! I want none of your kisses.

Trudge. Oh! very well --I'll take it again. (Offers to kiss her.)

Patty. Be quiet. I want to see Mr. Inkle: I have a message to him from Miss Narcissa. I shall get a sight of him, Now, I believe.

Trudge. May be not. He's a little busy at present.

Patty. Busy---ha! Plodding! What he's at his multiplication again?

Trudge. Very likely; so it would be a pity to interrupt him, you know.

Patty. Certainly; and the whole of my business was to prevent his hurrying himself---Tell him, we shan't be ready to receive him, at the Governor's, till to-morrow d'ye hear?

Trudge. No?

Patty. No. Things are not prepared. The place isn't in order; and the servants have not had proper notice of the arrival.

Trudge. Oh! let me alone to give the servants notice -Rat--Tat--Tat--It's all the notice we had in Treadneedle-street of the arrival of a visitor.

Patty. Threadneedle-street! Threadneedle nonsense! I'd have you to know we do every thing, here, with an air. Matters have taken another turn---Stile! Stile, Sir, is required here, I promise you.

Trudge. Turn--Stile! And pray what Stile will serve your turn now, Madam Patty?

Patty. A due dignity and decorum, to be sure. Sir Christopher intends Mr. Inkle, you know, for his son-in-law, and must receive him in public form, (which can't be till to-morrow morning) for the honor of his governorship: why the whole island will ring of it.

Trudge. The devil it will!

Patty. Yes; they've talk'd of nothing but my mistress's beauty and fortune, for these six weeks. Then he'll be introduced to the bride, you know.

Trudge. O, my poor master!

Patty. Then a publick breakfast; then a procession;
then

then---if nothing happens to prevent it, he'll get into church and be married, in a crack.

Trudge. Then he'll get into a damn'd scrape, in a crack.

“ Patty. Hey-day ! a scrape ! The holy state of matrimony !

Trudge. Yés ; it's plaguy holy ; and many of its votaries, as in other holy states, live in repentance and mortification.” Ah ! Poor Madam Yarico ! My poor pilgrick of a master, what will become of him ! (Half aside.)

Patty. Why, what's the matter with the booby ?

Trudge. Nothing, nothing—he'll be hang'd for poli-bigamy.

Patty. Polly who ?

Trudge. It must out—Patty !

Patty. Well ?

Trudge. Can you keep a secret ?

Patty. Try me !

Trudge. Then [Whispering] My Master keeps a girl.

Patty. Oh monstrous ! another woman ?

Trudge. As sure as one and one make two.

Patty. [Aside.] Rare news for my mistress !—Why I can hardly believe it : the grave, fly, steady, sober Mr. Inkle, do such a thing !

Trudge. Pooh ! it's always your fly, sober fellows, that go the most after the girls.

Patty. Well ; I should sooner suspect you.

Trudge. Me ? Oh Lord ! he ! he !—Do you think any smart, tight, little, black eyed wench, wou'd be struck with my figure ? [conceitedly.]

Patty. Pshaw ! never mind your figure. Tell me how it happen'd ?

Trudge. You shall hear : when the ship left us ashore, my master turn'd as pale as a sheet of paper. It isn't every body that's blest with courage, Patty.

Patty. True !

Trudge. However, I bid him cheer up ; told him, to stick to my elbow : took the lead, and began our march.

Patty. Well ?

Trudge. We hadn't gone far, when a damn'd one-eyed eyed black boar, that grinn'd like a devil, came down the hill in jog trot! My master melted as fast as a pot of pomatum!

Patty. Mercy on us!

Trudge. But what does I do, but whips out my desk knife, that I us'd to cut the quills with at home; met the monster, and slit up his throat like a pen—The boar bled like a pig.

Patty. Lord! Trudge, what a great traveller you are!

Trudge. Yes; I remember we fed on the fitch for a week.

Patty. Well, well; but the Lady.

Trudge. The Lady? Oh, true. By and by we came to a cave—a large hollow room, under ground, like a warehouse in the Adelphi—Well; there we were half an hour, before I could get him to go in; there's no accounting for fear you know. At last, in we went to a place hung round with skins, as it might be a Furrier's shop, and there was a fine Lady, snoaring on a bow and arrows.

Patty. What, all alone?

Trudge. Eh!—No—no—~~—~~ Hum—She had a young lion by way of a lap-dog.

Patty. Gemini; what did you do?

Trudge. Gave her a jog, and she open'd her eyes—she struck my master immediately.

Patty. Mercy on us! with what?

Trudge. With her beauty, you Ninny, to be sure: and they soon brought matters to bear. The wolves witness'd the contract—I gave her away—The crows croak'd Amen; and we had board and lodging for nothing.

Patty. And this is she he has brought to Barbadoes?

Trudge. The same.

Patty. Well; and tell me Trudge;—she's pretty, you say—Is she fair or brown? or—— Trudge. Um! she's a good comely copper.

Patty. How! a Tawney?

Trudge. Yes, quite dark; but very elegant; like a Wedgwood tea-pot.

Patty.

Patty. Oh! the monster! the filthy fellow! Live with a black-a-moor!

Trudge. Why there's no great harm in't, I hope?

Patty. Faugh! I wou'dn't let him kiss me for the world: he'd make my face all smutty.

Trudge. Zounds! you are mighty nice all of a sudden; but I'd have you to know, Madam Patty, that Blackamoor Ladies, as you call 'em, are some of the very few, whose complexions never rub off! S'bud, if they did, Wows and I shou'd have changed faces by this time—But mum; not a word for your life.

Patty. Not I! except to the Governor and family. [Aside.] But I must run—and, remember, Trudge, if your master has made a mistake here, he has himself to thank for his pains.

S O N G.

*Tho' lovers, like marksmen, all aim at the heart,
Some hit wide of the mark, as we wenches all know;
But of all the bad shots, he's the worst in the art
Who shoots at a pigeon, and kills a crow——O ho!
Your master has kill'd a crow.*

II.

*When younkers go out, the first time in their lives,
At random they shoot, and let fly as they go;
So your master, unskill'd how to level at wives,
Has shot at a pigeon, and kill'd a crow.

III.

*Love and money thus wasted, in terrible trim!
His powder is spent, and his shot running low:
Yet the pigeon he miss'd, I've a notion, with him
Will never, for such a mistake, pluck a crow.
No! no!
Your master may keep his crow.
[Exit Patty.]*

Trudge. Pshaw! these girls are so plaguy proud of their white and red! but I won't be shamed out of D 3 Wows,

Wows, that's flat. Master, to be sure, while we were in the forest, taught Yarico to read, with his pencil and pocket-book. What then? Wows comes on fine and fast in her lessons. A little awkward at first, to be sure. —Ha! ha! —She's so us'd to feed with her hands, that I can't get her to eat her victuals, in a genteel, Christian way, for the soul of me; when she has stuck a morsel on her fork, she don't know how to guide it; but pops up her knuckles to her mouth, and the meat goes up to her ear. But, no matter — After all the fine, flashy London girls, Wowski's the wench for my money.

S O N G.

*A Clerk I was in London gay,
 Femmy linkum feedle,
 And went in boots to see the play,
 Merry fiddlem tweedle.
 I march'd the lobby, twirl'd my stick,
 Diddle, daddle, deedle;
 The girls all cry'd, "He's quite the kick."
 Oh, Femmy linkum feedle.*

II.

*Hey! for America I sail,
 Yankee doodle deedle;
 The sailor boys cry'd, "smoke his tail!"
 Femmy linkum feedle.
 On English belles I turn'd my back,
 Diddle, daddle, deedle;
 And got a foreign Fair, quite Black,
 O twaddle, twaddle, tweedle!*

III.

*Your London girls, with roguish trip,
 Wheedle, wheedle, wheedle,
 May boast their pouting under-lip,
 Fiddle, faddle, feedle.
 My Wows wou'd beat a hundred such
 Diddle, daddle, deedle,
 Whose upper-lip pouts twice as much,
 O, pretty double wheedle!*

IV. Rings

VI.

*Rings I'll buy to deck her toes ;
 Femmy linkum feedle ;
 A feather fine shall grace her nose ;
 Waving fiddle feedle.
 With jealousy I ne'er shall burst ;
 Who'd steal my bone of bone-a ?
 A white Othello, I can trust
 A dingy Desdemona.*

[Exit]

I know not what to think—I have given her distant hints of parting ; but still, so strong her confidence in my affection, she prattles on without regarding me. Poor Yarico ! I must not—cannot quit her. When I would speak, her look, her mere simplicity disarms me : I dare not wound such innocence. Simplicity is like a smiling babe ; which, to the ruffian, that would murder it, stretching its little, naked, helpless arms, pleads, speechless, its own cause. And yet Narcissa's family—

Enter. Trudge.

Trudge. There he is, like a beau bespeaking a coat ---doubting which colour to chuse—Sir—

Inkle. What now ?

Trudge. Nothing unexpected, Sir :—I hope you won't be angry.

Inkle. Angry !

Trudge. I'm sorry for it ; but I am come to give you joy, Sir !

Inkle. Joy !———of what ?

Trudge. A wife, Sir ; a white one.—I know it will vex you, but Miss Narcissa means to make you happy, to-morrow morning.

D 4

Inkle.

Inkle. To-morrow!

Trudge. Yes, fir; and as I have been out of employ, in both my capacities, lately, after I have dress'd your hair, I may draw up the marriage articles.

Inkle. Whence comes your intelligence, fir?

Trudge. Patty told me all that has pass'd in the Governor's family, on the quay, fir. Women, you know, can never keep a secret. You'll be introduc'd in form, with the whole island to witness it.

Inkle. So public too!——Unlucky!

Trudge. There will be nothing but rejoicings, in compliment to the wedding, she tells me; all noise and uproar! Married people like it, they say.

Inkle. Strange! That I should be so blind to my interest, as to be the only person this distresses!

Trudge. They are talking of nothing else but the match, it seems.

Inkle. Confusion! How can I, in honor, retract?

Trudge. And the bride's merits——

Inkle. True!—A fund of merits!—I wou'd not---but from necessity---a case so nice as this---I---wou'd not wish to retract.

Trudge. Then they call her so handsome.

Inkle. Very true! so handsome! the whole world wou'd laugh at me: they'd call it folly to retract.

Trudge. And then they say so much of her fortune!

Inkle. O death! it would be madness to retract. Surely, my faculties have slept, and this long parting, from my Narcissa, has blunted my sense of her accomplishments. 'Tis this alone makes me so weak and wavering. I'll see her immediately. [Going.]

Trudge. Stay, stay, fir; I am desir'd to tell you, the Governor won't open his gates to us till to-morrow morning, and is now making preparations to receive you at breakfast, with all the honours of matrimony.

Inkle. Well, be it so; it will give me time, at all events, to put my affairs in train.

Trudge. Yes; it's a short respite before execution; and if your honour was to go and comfort poor Madam Yarico——

Inkle.

Inkle. Damnation ! Scoundrel, how dare you offer your advice ?---I dread to think of her !

Trudge. I've done, sir, I've done--But I know I should blubber over Wows all night, if I thought of parting with her in the morning.

Inkle. Insolence ! begone, sir !

Trudge. Lord, sir, I only---

Inkle. Get down stairs, sir, directly.

Trudge. [Going out.] Ah ! you may well put your hand to your head ; and a bad head it must be, to forget that Madam Yarico prevented her countrymen from peeling off the upper part of it. (Aside.) [Exit.

Inkle. 'Sdeath, what am I about ? How have I slumbered ? " Rouse, rouse, good Thomas Inkle !" Is it I--I--who, in London, laugh'd at the youngers of the town --and when I saw their chariots, with some fine, tempting girl, perk'd in the corner, come shopping to the city, wou'd cry--Ah !--there sits ruin--there flies the Greenhorn's money ! then wonder'd with myself how men cou'd trifle time on women ; or, indeed, think of any women without fortunes. And now, forsooth, it rests, with me to turn romantic puppy, and give up All for Love.---Give up!--Oh, monstrous folly!--thirty thousand pounds !

Trudge. (Peeping in at the door.)

Trudge. May I come in, sir ?

Inkle. What does the booby want ?

Trudge. Sir, your uncle wants to see you.

Inkle. Mr, Medium ! show him up directly.

[Exit Trudge.

He must not know of this. To-morrow !—" I must be " blunt with Yarico." I wish this marriage were more distant, that I might break it to her by degrees : She'd take my purpose better, were it less suddenly deliver'd. " Women's weak minds bear grief, as colts do burdens : " Load them with their full wieght at once, and they " sink under it ; but, every day, add little, imper- " ceptibly, to little, 'tis wonderful how much they'll " carry."

Enter

Enter Medium.

Med. Ah! here he is! Give me your hand, Nephew! welcome, welcome to Barbadoes, with all my heart.

Inkle. I am glad to meet you here, Uncle!

Med. That you are, that you are, I'm sure. Lord! Lord! when we parted last, how I wish'd we were in a room together, if it was but the black hole! "Since we sunder'd," I have not been able to sleep o'nights, for thinking of you. I've laid awake, and fancied I saw you sleeping your last, with your head in the lion's mouth, for a night-cap; and I've never seen a bear brought over, to dance about the street, but I thought you might be bobbing up and down in its belly.

Inkle. I am very much oblig'd to you.

Med. Ay, ay, I am happy enough to find you safe and sound, I promise you. "Why, I've been hunting you all over the quay, and been in half the houses upon it, before I could find you; I should have been here sooner else. Whew!--I'm so warm--I've run as fast——"

"Inkle. As you did in the forest—Eh! Mr. Medium?"

"Med. Well, well; thank heaven we are both out of the forest! Hounslow-heath at dusk is a trifle to it. I shall never see a tree without shaking, and, I cou'd not walk in a grove again with comfort, tho' it were in the middle of Paradise." But, you have a fine prospect before you now, young man. I am come to take you with me to Sir Christopher, who is impatient to see you.

Inkle. To-morrow, I hear, he expects me.

Med. To-morrow! directly—this--moment---in half a second---I left him standing on tip-toe, as he calls it, to embrace you; and he's standing on tip-toe now in the great parlour, and there he'll stand till you come to him.

Inkle. Is he so hasty?

Med. Hasty! he's all pepper--and wonders you are not with him, before it's possible to get at him. Hasty indeed!

indeed ! Why he vows you shall have his daughter this very night

Inkle. What a situation !

Med. Why, it's hardly fair just after a voyage. But come, bustle, bustle, he'll think you neglect him. He's rare and touchy, I can tell you ; and if he once takes it into his head that you show the least flight to his daughter, it wou'd knock up all your schemes in a minute.

Inkle. Confusion ! If he should hear of Yarico ! (Aside.)

Med. But at present you are all and all with him ; he has been telling me his intentions these six weeks, you'll be a fine warm husband, I promise you.

Inkle. This cursed connection ! (Aside.)

Med. It is not for me, though, to tell you how to play your cards ; you are a prudent young man, and can make calculations in a wood. " I need not tell you " that the least shadow of affront disoblige a testy old " fellow : but, remember, I never speak ill of my friends."

Inkle. Fool ! fool ! fool ! (Aside.)

Med. Why, what the devil is the matter with you ?

Inkle. It must be done effectually, or all is lost ; mere parting would not conceal it. (Aside.)

Med. Ah ! now he's got to his damn'd Square Root again, I suppose, and Old Nick would not move him-- Why, nephew !

Inkle. The planter that I spoke with cannot be arriv'd---but time is precious---the first I meet---common prudence now demands it. I'm fix'd ; I'll part with her. (Aside.) [Exit.

Med. Damn me, but he's mad ! The woods have turn'd the poor boy's brains ; he's scalp'd, and gone crazy ! Hoho ! Inkle ! Nephew ! Gad, I'll spoil your arithmetick, I warrant me. [Exit.

Enter Sir Christopher Curry.

Sir Chr. Ods my life ! I can scarce contain my happiness. I have left them safe in church in the middle of the the ceremony. I ought to have given Narcissa away, they told me ; but I caper'd about so much for joy, that Old Spintext advised me to go and cool my heels on the quay, till it was all over. Od, I'm so happy ; and they shall see, now, what an old fellow can do at a wedding.

Enter Inkle.

Inkle. Now for dispatch ! Hark'ee, old gentleman !
(to the governor.)

Sir Chr. Well, young gentleman ?

Inkle. If I mistake not, I know your business here.

Sir Chr. 'Egad I believe half the island knows it, by this time.

Inkle. Then to the point---I have a female, whom I wish to part with.

Sir Chr. Very likely ; it's a common case, now a-days, with many a man.

Inkle. If you could satisfy me you would use her mildly, and treat her with more kindness than is usual--for I can tell you she's of no common stamp---perhaps we might agree.

Sir Chr. Oho ! a slave ! Faith, now I think on't, my daughter may want an attendant or two extraordinary ; and as you say she's a delicate girl, above the common run, and none of your thick-lip'd, flat nos'd, squabby, dumpling dowdies, I don't much care if---

Inkle. And for her treatment---

Sir Chr. Look ye, young man ; I love to be plain : I shall treat her a good deal better than you wou'd, I fancy ; for, though I witness this custom every day, I can't help thinking the only excuse for buying our fellow creatures, is to rescue 'em from the hands of those who are unfeeling enough to bring them to market.

Inkle. "Somewhat too blunt, Sir ; I am no common trafficker, dependant upon proud rich planters." Fair words old gentleman ; an Englishman won't put up an affront.

Sir Chr. An Englishman ! More shame for you !
"Let Englishmen blush at such practices," Men, who so

so fully feel the blessings of liberty, are doubly cruel in depriving the helpless of their freedom.

Inkle. Confusion!

Sir Chr. 'Tis not my place to say so much; but I can't help speaking my mind.

Inkle. I must be cool" --Let me assure you, Sir, 'tis not my occupation; but for a private reason--an instant pressing necessity——

Sir Chr. Well, well, I have a pressing necessity too; I can't stand to talk now; I expect company here presently; but if you'll ask for me to-morrow, at the Castle--

Inkle. The Castle!

Sir Chr. Aye, Sir, the Castle; the Governor's Castle; known all over Barbadoes.

Inkle. 'Sdeath, this man must be on the Governor's establishment; his steward, perhaps, and sent after me, while Sir Christopher is impatiently waiting for me. I've gone too far; my secret may be known---As 'tis, I'll win this fellow to my interest. (to him) One word more, Sir: my business must be done immediately; and as you seem acquainted at the Castle, if you should see me there--and there I mean to sleep to-night——

Sir Chr. The Devil you do!

Inkle. Your finger on your lips; and never breathe a syllable of this transaction.

Sir Chr. No! Why not?

Inkle. Because, for reasons, which perhaps you'll know to-morrow, I might be injured with the Governor, whose most particular friend I am.

Sir Chr. So! here's a particular friend of mine, coming to sleep at my house, that I never saw in my life. I'll sound this fellow. (Aside.) I fancy young gentleman, as you are such a bosom friend of the Governor's, you can hardly do anything to alter your situation with him?

"I shou'dn't imagine any thing could bring him to think a bit worse of you than he does at present."

Inkle. Oh! pardon me; but you'll find that hereafter---besides, you, doubtless know his character?

Sir Chr. Oh, as well as I do my own. But let's understand one another. You may trust me, now you've gone gone so far. You are acquainted with his character, no doubt, to a hair?

Inkle. I am---I see we shall understand each other. You know him too, I see as well as I.--A very touchy, testy, hot old fellow.

Sir Chr. Here's a scoundrel! I hot and touchy! Zounds! I can hardly contain my passion!--But I won't discover myself. I'll see the bottom of this---
(to him). Well now, as we seem to have come to a tolerable explanation---Let's proceed to business---Bring me the woman.

Inkle. No; there you must excuse me. I rather wou'd avoid seeing her more; and wish it to be settled without my seeming interference. My presence might distress her---You conceive me?

Sir Chr. Zounds! what an unfeeling rascal!--The poor girl's in love with him, I suppose. No, no, fair and open. My dealing's with you, and you only: I see her now, or I declare off.

Inkle. Well then, you must be satisfied: yonder's my servant--ha-a thought has struck me. Come here, Sir.

Enter Trudge.

I'll write my purpose, and send it her by him---It's lucky that I taught her to decypher characters; my labour now is paid. (Takes out his pocket-book and writes.)—This is somewhat less abrupt; 'twill soften matters. (to himself.) Give this to Yarico; then bring her hither with you.

Trudge. I shall, Sir. (Going.)

Inkle. Stay; come back. This soft fool, if uninstructed, may add to her distress: his drivelling sympathy may feed her grief, instead of soothing it.—When she has read this paper, seem to make light of it; tell her it is a thing of course, done purely for her good. I here inform her that I must part with her. D'ye understand your lesson?

Trudge. Pa--part with Ma--madam Ya-ric-o!

Inkle.

Inkle. Why does the blockhead stammer!—I have my reasons. No muttering---And let me tell you, sir, if your rare bargain were gone too, 'twou'd be the better: she may babble our story of the forest, and spoil my fortune.

Trudge. I'm sorry for it, sir; I have lived with you a long while; I've half a year's wages too due the 25th ult^o. due for dressing your hair, and scribbling your parchments; but take my scribbling; take my frizzing; take my wages; and I, and Wows, will take ourselves off together—she sav'd my live, and rot me, if any thing but death shall part us.

Inkle. Impertinent! Go, and deliver your message.

Trudge. I'm gone, sir. Lord, Lord! I never carried a letter with such ill will in all my born days. [Exit.

Sir Chr. Well--shall I see the girl?

Inkle. She'll be here presently. One thing I had forgot: when she is your's, I need not caution you, after the hints I've given, to keep her from the castle. If Sir Christopher should see her, 'twould lead, you know, to a discovery of what I wish conceal'd.

Sir Chr. Depend upon me---Sir Christopher will know no more of our meeting, than he does at this moment.

Inkle. Your secrecy shall not be unrewarded; I'll recommend you, particularly, to his good graces.

Sir Chr. Thank ye, thank ye; but I'm pretty much in his good graces, as it is; I don't know any body he has a greater respect for.—

Re-enter Trudge.

Inkle. Now, Sir, have you perform'd your message?

Trudge. Yes, I gave her the letter.

Inkle. And where is Yarico? did she say she'd come? didn't you do as you were order'd? didn't you speak to her?

Trudge. I cou'dn't, sir, I cou'dn't---I intended to say what you bid me--but I felt such a pain in my throat, I cou'dn't speak a word, for the soul of me; and 10, so, Sir, I fell a crying.

Inkle. Blockhead!

Sir Chr. 'Sblood, but he's a very honest blockhead. Tell me, my good fellow--what said the wench?

Trudge. Nothing at all, sir. She sat down with her two hands clasp'd on her knees, and look'd so pitifully in my face, I cou'd not stand it. Oh, here she comes. I'll go and find Wows: if I must be melancholy, she shall keep my company. [Exit.

Sir Chr. Ods my life, as comely a wench, as ever I saw!

Enter Yarico, who looks for some time in Inkle's face, bursts into tears, and falls on his neck.

Inkle. In tears! nay, Yarico! why this?

Yar. Oh do not--do not leave me!

Inkle. Why, simple girl! I'm labouring for your good. My interest, here, is nothing: I can do nothing from myself, you are ignorant of our country's customs. I must give way to men more powerful, who will not have me with you. But see, my Yarico, ever anxious for your welfare, I've found a kind, good person who will protect you.

Yarico. Ah! why not you protect me?

Inkle. I have no means--how can I?

Yarico. Just as I sheltered you. Take me to yonder mountain, where I see no smoke from tall, high houses, fill'd with your cruel countrymen. None of your princes, there, will come to take me from you. And should they stray that way, we'll find a lurking place, just like my own poor cave; where many a day I sat beside you, and bless'd the chance that brought you to it---that I might save your life.

Sir Chr. His life! Zounds! my blood boils at the scoundrel's ingratitude!

Yar. Come, come, let's go. I always feared these cities. Let's fly and seek the woods; and there we'll wander hand in hand together. No cares shall vex us then

then---We'll let the day glide by in idleness ; and you shall sit in the shade, and watch the sun beam playing on the brook, while I sing the song that pleases you. No cares, love, but for food---and we'll live cheerily I warrant---In the fresh, early morning, you shall hunt down our game, and I will pick you berries---and then, at night I'll trim our bed of leaves, and lie me down in peace--Oh ! we shall be so happy !-----

Inkle. " This is mere trifling--the trifling of an un-enlighten'd Indian." Hear me Yarico. My countrymen and yours differ as much in minds as in complexions. We were not born to live in woods and caves----to seek subsistence by pursuing beasts---We christians, girl, hunt money ; a thing unknown to you---But, here, 'tis money which brings us ease, plenty, command, power, everything ; and of course happiness. You are the bar to my attaining this ; therefore 'tis necessary for my good-----and which I think you value-----

Yarico. You know I do ; so much, that it would break my heart to leave you.

Inkle. But we must part : If you are seen with me, I shall lose all.

Yar. I gave up all for you---my friends---my country : all that was dear to me : and still grown dearer since you shelter'd there---All, all was left for you--and were it now to do again--again I'd cross the seas, and follow you, all the world over.

Inkle. We idle time ; Sir, she is your's. See you obey this gentleman ; 'twill be the better for you. (going.)

Yar. O barbarous ! (holding him) Do not, do not abandon me !

Inkle. No more.

Yar. Stay but a little : I shan't live long to be a burden to you : Your cruelty has cut me to the heart. Protect me but a little---or I'll obey this man, and undergo all hardships for your good ; stay but to witness 'em. --I soon shall sink with grief ; tarry till then ; and hear me bless your name when I am dying ; and beg you, now and then, when I am gone, to heave a sigh for your poor Yarico.

Inkle. I dare not listen. You, Sir, I hope, will take good care of her. (going.)

Sir Chr. Care of her!---that I will---I'll cherish her like my own daughter; and pour balm into the heart of a poor, innocent girl, that has been wounded by the artifices of a scoundrel.

Inkle. Hah! 'Sdeath, sir, how dare you!—

Sir Chr. 'Sdeath, Sir, how dare you look an honest man in the face?

Inkle. Sir, you shall feel---

Sir Chr. Feel!—It's more than ever you did, I believe. Mean, fordid, wretch! dead to all sense of honour, gratitude, or humanity--I never heard of such barbarity! I have a son-in-law, who has been left in the same situation; but, if I thought him capable of such cruelty, dam'me if I wou'd not return him to sea, with a peck loaf, in a cockle shell—Come, come, cheer up, my girl! You shan't want a friend to protect you, I warrant you.—(taking Yarico by the hand.)

Inkle. Insolence! The Governor shall hear of this insult.

Sir Chr. The Governor! lyar! cheat! rogue! impostor! breaking all ties you ought to keep, and pretending to those you have no right to. The Governor never had such a fellow in the whole catalogue of his acquaintance—the Governor disowns you—the Governor disclaims you--the Governor abhors you; and to your utter confusion, here stands the Governor to tell you so. Here stands old Curry, who never talked to a rogue without telling him what he thought of him.

Inkle. Sir Christopher!—Lost and undone!

Med. (Without.) Holo! Young Multiplication! Zounds! I have been peeping in every cranny of the house. Why, young Rule of three! (Enters from the Inn.) Oh, here you are at last---Ah, Sir Christopher! What are you there! too impatient to wait at home. But here's one that will make you easy, I fancy. (Clapping Inkle on the shoulder.)

Sir

Sir Chr. How came you to know him?

Med. Ha! ha! Well, that's curious enough too. So you have been talking here, without finding out each other.

Sir Chr. No, no; I have found him out with a vengeance.

Med. Not you. Why this is the dear boy. It's my nephew, that is; your son in law, that is to be. It's Inkle!

Sir Chr. It's a lie; and you're a purblind old booby—and this dear boy is a damn'd scoundrel.

Med. Hey-dey what's the meaning of this? One was mad before, and he has bit the other, I suppose.

Sir Chr. But here comes the dear boy---the true boy—the jolly boy, piping hot from church, with my daughter.

Enter Campley, Narcissa, and Patty.

Med. Campley!

Sir Chr. Who? Campley; —It's no such thing.

Camp. That's my name, indeed, Sir Christopher.

Sir Chr. The Devil it is! And how came you, Sir, to impose upon me, and assume the name of Inkle? A name which every man of honesty ought to be ashamed of.

Camp. I never did, sir.—Since I failed from England with your daughter, my affection has daily encreased: and when I came to explain myself to you, by a number of concurring circumstances, which I am now partly acquainted with, you mistook me for that gentleman. Yet had I even then been aware of your mistake, I must confess, the regard for my own happiness would have tempted me to let you remain undeceiv'd.

Sir Chr. And did you, Narcissa, join in---

Nar. How could I, my dear Sir, disobey you?

Patty. Lord, your honour, what young Lady could refuse a captain?

Camp. I am a soldier, Sir Christopher. Love and War is the soldier's motto; though my income is trifling to your intended son-in-law's, still the chance of war has enabled me to support the object of my love above indigence. Her fortune, Sir Christopher, I do not consider myself by any means entitled to.

Sir Chr. 'Sblood! but you must tho'. Give me your hand, my young Mars, and bless you both together! —Thank you, thank you for cheating an old fellow into giving his daughter to a lad of spirit, when he was going to throw her away upon one, in whose breast the mean passion of avarice smothers the smallest spark of affection, or humanity.

Inkle. Confusion!

Nar. I have this moment heard a story of a transaction in the forest, which, I own, would have rendered compliance with your former commands very disagreeable.

Patty. Yes, Sir, I told my mistress he had brought over a Hotty-pot gentlewoman.

Sir Chr. Yes, but he would have left her for you; (To Narcissa) and you for his interest; and sold you, perhaps, as he has this poor girl, to me, as a requital for preserving his life.

Nar. How!

Enter Trudge and Wowski.

Trudge. Come along, Wows! take a long last leave of your poor Mistress: throw your pretty, ebony arms about her neck.

Wowf. No, no; ---she not go; you not leave poor Wowski. (Throwing her arms about Yarico.)

Sir Chr. Poor girl! A companion, I take it!

Trudge. A thing of my own, sir. I cou'dn't help following my master's example in the woods——Like Master, like Man, sir.

Sir Chr. But you wou'd not sell her, and be hang'd to you, you dog, wou'd you?

Trudge. Hang me, like a dog, if I wou'd, sir.

Sir Chr. So say I to every fellow that breaks an obligation due to the feelings of a man. But, old Medium, what what have you to say for your hopeful nephew ?

Med. I never speak ill of my friends, Sir Christopher.

Sir Chr. Pshaw !

Inkle. Then let me speak : hear me defend a conduct——

Sir Chr. Defend ! Zounds ! plead guilty at once--it's the only hope left of obtaining mercy.

Inkle. Suppose, old gentleman, you had a son ?

Sir Chr. 'Sblood ! then I'd make him an honest fellow ; and teach him that the feeling heart never knows greater pride than when it's employ'd in giving succour to the unfortunate. I'd teach him to be his father's own son to a hair.

Inkle. Even so my father tutor'd me : from infancy, bending my tender mind, like a young sapling, to his will—Interest was the grand prop round which he twin'd my pliant green affections : taught me in childhood to repeat old sayings--all tending to his own fix'd principles, and the first sentence that I ever lisp'd, was Charity begins at Home.

Sir Chr. I shall never like a proverb again, as long as I live.

Inkle. As I grew up, he'd prove---and by example---were I in want, I might e'en starve, for what the world cared for their neighbours ; why then shou'd I care for the world ? Men now liv'd for themselves. These were his doctrines : then, sir, what wou'd you say, should I, in spite of habit, precept, education, fly in my father's face, and spurn his councils ?

Sir Chr. Say ! why, that you were a damn'd honest, undutiful fellow. O curse such principles ! Principles, which destroy all confidence between man and man---Principles, which none but a rogue cou'd instil, and none but a rogue cou'd imbibe.---Principles——

Inkle. Which I renounce.

Sir Chr. Eh !

Inkle. Renounce entirely. Ill-founded precept too long has steel'd my breast---but still 'tis vulnerable--- this this trial was too much--Nature, 'gainst Habit combating within me, has penetrated to my heart; a heart, I own, long callous to the feelings of sensibility; but now it bleeds--and bleeds for my poor Yarico. Oh, let me clasp her to it, while 'tis glowing, and mingle tears of love and penitence. [Embracing her.]

Trudge. [Capering about.] Wows, give me a kiss!
[Wows goes to Trudge.]

Yar. And shall we--shall we be happy?

Inkle. Aye; ever, ever, Yarico.

Yarico. I knew we shou'd--and yet I fear'd--but shall I still watch over you? Oh! Love, you surely gave your Yarico such pain, only to make her feel this happiness the greater.

Wows. (Going to Yarico) Oh Wowski so happy!-- and yet I think I not glad neither.

Trudge. Eh, Wows! How!--why not?

Wows. 'Cause I can't help cry.-----

Sir Chr. Then, if that's the case--curse me, if I think I'm very glad either. What the plague's the matter with my eyes?--Young man, your hand--I am now proud and happy to shake it.

Med. Well, Sir Christopher, what do you say to my hopeful nephew now?

Sir Chr. Say! Why, confound the fellow, I say, that is ungenerous enough to remember the bad action of a man who has virtue left in his heart to repent it.--
As for you, my good fellow, (to Trudge) I must, with your master's permission, employ you myself.

Trudge. O rare!--Bless your honour!--Wows!
you'll be Lady, you jade, to a Governor's Factotum.

Wows. Ifs.---I Lady Jacktotum.

Sir Chr. And now, my young folks, we'll drive home, and celebrate the wedding. Od's my life! I long to be shaking a foot at the fiddles, and I shall dance ten times the lighter, for reforming an Inkle, while I have it in my power to reward the innocence of a Yarico.

*Come let us dance and sing,
While all Barbadoes bells shall ring ;
Love scrapes the fiddle-string,
And Venus plays the lute ;
Hymen gay, foots away,
Happy at our wedding-day,
Cocks his chin, and figures in,
To tabor, fife, and flute.*

Is vanish'd into empty air,
Ah ! how can I forbear
To join the jocund dance ?
To and fro, couples go,
On the light fantastic toe,
While with glee, merrily,
The rosy hours advance.*

*When first the swelling sea
Hither bore my love and me,
What then my fate would be,
Little did I think——
Doom'd to know care and woe,
Happy still is Yarico ;
Since her love will constant prove,
And nobly scorns to shrink.*

My fortune's fair, tho' blacks my wife,
Who fears domestic strife—*

Shall find with her Façtotum here;
Night and day, I'll frisk and play
About the house, with Wows.*

Unless, here, some friends appear,
Who like this wedding night.*
